The European Society of Emergency Medicine (EuSEM) is growing rapidly because of the surging demand for emergency medicine of a high quality throughout Europe. EuSEM has achieved a huge growth in the size of its congresses, which provide an important opportunity for further training and networking for emergency physicians in Europe and beyond. Our last congress in Vienna in Austria in October 2016 attracted more than 2,500 delegates.

To bring such a congress to life demands a first class scientific programme and highly-skilled organisation. It also requires excellent support from industry.

I thank E.Care for their decision to become a platinum sponsor of the EuSEM congress in Vienna. They made a significant contribution as a platinum sponsor to the success of the EuSEM Vienna congress.

The organisation of ED work and efficient working processes play an immensely important role in the provision of high-quality emergency care. This is especially true as millions more people seek care every year in Europe's emergency departments. IT solutions like E.Care can make a major contribution to providing top quality care for patients by helping to create efficient working processes in emergency departments.

I am very grateful to E.Care for their continuous support of EuSEM congresses over many years and especially during my EuSEM presidency, with special thanks for their important sponsorship of the EuSEM congress in Vienna.

Best regards

Dr. Barbara Hogan
 Immediate Past President
 European Society of Emergency Medicine (EuSEM)
